

Living Connected

Are you actively building a caring, meaningful relationship with:

- God?
- Yourself?
- Other people?

This is the key to a healthy devotional life and a healthy marriage. It's what brings growth and promotion in church and job relationships.

We can receive deliverance, break off generational hindrances and rebuke the enemy, however, we must also deal with our sense of alienation so our hearts can connect to love in all our relationships.

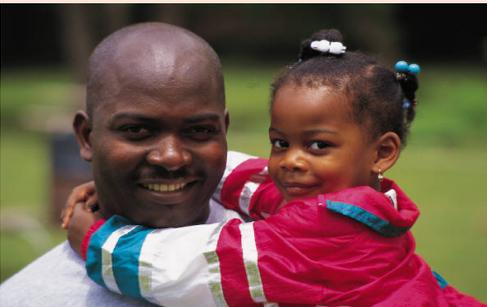

Robert has many years of experience in Prayer Ministry. All of his teachings are based on empirical results, from working with people all the way to the point of victory. This has greatly refined the Father's love teachings to what has been proven in actual experience with hundreds of people.

Restoring Paths to Dwell In -- Isaiah 58:12

Robert Hartzell Ministries

Living Daily in the Father's Love

This is foundational to having the capacity to trust that God will be available to you and meet your needs emotionally and physically.

2nd Teaching: Knowing God's Tenderness - Love

The ability to bond with God's love is to live connected with Him.

Too often we live in fight or flight mode. Sarcasm and mocking, or surface-only conversations and the silent treatment are all ways we keep walls around our hearts.

Many Christians struggle with counterfeit affections. When walls prevent you from connecting with love, you are hindered from building a caring, meaningful relationship with God, yourselves, and others. This results in having replacement relationships with food, alcohol, shopping, or even hyper-religious activity.

3rd Teaching: Placing Love First - Esteem

Seeing the primacy of love in every area of life makes everything else work. It is our plumb line.

Any Christian activity (evangelism, prayer, Bible study...) not rooted in love will gradually gravitate toward law and legalism. Whenever I feel I have to do something to be loved and accepted it leads toward striving and pain.

Receiving God's affirmation keeps us based in love, free from performance and striving.

Destiny is covered in our Shame and Sonship series.

1st Teaching: Love Resolves Fear - Security

This teaching will dislodge the fear that erodes our security in God's love. Only from this foundation can growth take place.

Fear closes the heart. If there is no heart connection, then there is still fear.

It is not just understanding the Father's love, but also feeling secure enough in it to hold your heart open to Him.

Robert Hartzell Ministries is a teaching and counseling ministry with a heart to see Christians find intimacy with God and make a difference in the world around them.

As a para-church ministry, we desire to encourage and heal believers, strengthen the local church, and enable the Body of Christ to be activated to live out their calling.
